

NO. _____

IN RE JOHN DOES 1 AND 2

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

RELATORS' MOTION FOR EMERGENCY STAY

Relators ask the Court for an emergency stay.

A. INTRODUCTION

1. Relators are John Does 1 and 2; Real Parties-In-Interest are: PRK Enterprises, Inc.; Klein Investments, Inc.; Google, Inc.; www.blogger.com; www.operationkleinwatch.blogspot.com; and www.samtheeagleusa.blogspot.com; Respondent is the Honorable Donald J. Floyd, presiding judge of the 172nd District Court of Jefferson County, Texas.
2. Relators file their petition for writ of mandamus concurrently with this motion for emergency relief.
3. Relators attach a certificate of compliance certifying that on May 17, 2010, they notified all Real Parties-in-Interest by facsimile or hand delivery that a motion for temporary relief would be filed. TEX. R. APP. P. 52.10(a).

B. ARGUMENT & AUTHORITIES

4. The Court may grant temporary relief pending its determination of an original proceeding. TEX. R. APP. P. 52.10(b).

5. This emergency stay is necessary to maintain the status quo of the parties and preserve the Court's jurisdiction to consider the merits of the original proceeding. In re Reed, 901 S.W.2d 604, 609 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 1995, orig. proceeding).

6. Relators' original proceeding for writ of mandamus filed concurrently with this motion arises from PRK Enterprises, Inc.'s and Klein Investments, Inc.'s petition seeking an order allowing them to take a pre-suit deposition of Google, Inc., pursuant to TEX. R. CIV. P. 202.2(1), allegedly to investigate potential claims for defamation and conspiracy.

7. As more fully detailed in Relators' petition, Respondent's January 29, 2010, order compelling Google to comply with petitioners' subpoena to produce documents revealing Relators' identities is unlawful because Rule 202 does not permit any form of pre-suit discovery except depositions. TEX. R. CIV. P. 202.1; In re Akzo Nobel Chemical Co., 24 S.W.3d 919, 920 (Tex. App.—Beaumont 2000, orig. proceeding). Petitioners' subpoena is also unenforceable because it was not served in accordance with TEX. R. CIV. P. 176.3(a) and because the subpoena was not accompanied by proof under oath that all fees due the witness by law were paid—at least as of the date that Respondent compelled Google to respond. TEX. R. CIV. P. 176.8(b). In addition, petitioners' subpoena tramples Relators' constitutionally protected First Amendment right to anonymous speech. Respondent's failure to comply with the cited rules and law was a clear abuse of discretion that leaves Relators with no adequate remedy at law.

8. Respondent's order renders Relators unable to preserve their right to anonymous speech pending this Court's review.¹ Therefore, Relators ask the Court to stay Respondent's January 29, 2010, order compelling Google to produce documents until the Court has ruled on Relators' petition for writ of mandamus.

C. CONCLUSION & PRAYER

9. For the reasons stated in this motion, Relators ask the Court for an emergency stay of Respondent's January 29, 2010, order denying the motions to quash the subpoena duces tecum and compelling Google to comply in order to maintain the status quo of the parties and preserve the Court's jurisdiction to consider the merits of Relators' original proceeding. Relators pray for such other and further relief, at law or in equity, as to which they shall show themselves to be lawfully entitled.

¹ It should be noted that it was almost certainly the intent of petitioners and Google, Inc., to preserve Relators' right to challenge petitioners' subpoena in an appellate court when they agreed that Google would not produce documents sought unless "there was no successful appeal" of any order enforcing petitioners' subpoena. (Tab F of Relators' Petition for Mandamus). However, the original proceeding filed contemporaneously with this motion is, strictly speaking, not an "appeal." Therefore, in the absence of the stay requested here, it would be possible for Klein to argue that Relators' prosecution of a petition for a writ of mandamus was not a "successful appeal."
